PAMELA NABORS ELECTED TO NAWDP BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Washington, DC - The National Association of Workforce Development Professionals (NAWDP) is pleased to announce the election of Pamela Nabors to its Board of Directors.

Ms. Nabors is the Director of One-Stop Services at Capital Workforce Partners, the North Central Connecticut Workforce Investment Board in Hartford. In addition to being a tireless advocate for improving the skills of workforce professionals, Pam also has been nationally recognized for her efforts leading Capital Workforce Partners' LIFE– Low Income Families Employment - Program. Prior to Capital Workforce Partners, she was Planning Director for the WIB in Brevard County, FL and also Training Director at Brevard Community College. She holds a Certified Workforce Development Professional (CWDP) credential with the Management Services Endorsement.

As the economy continues to evolve, the work of workforce development professionals – and the organization that represents them – becomes even more important to the continued competitiveness of our country.

“Pam exemplifies the degree of professionalism and commitment to excellence that America needs if it is to continue to enjoy a world-class workforce,” said NAWDP Executive Director, Bridget Brown. “We are fortunate to have such an experienced professional on our Board and I look forward to learning from her experience in improving workforce development services.”

Members of the NAWDP Board of Directors serve without compensation or reimbursement of expenses. They contribute their time and resources to advance the profession of workforce development, both for the benefit of the NAWDP members they represent and society as a whole.
